Domestic and Family Violence Implementation Council meeting
6 October 2016

Representatives of the local community, including the Mayor of Toowoomba, attended the Council meeting to participate in a round table discussion about local domestic and family violence issues. The Minister for Communities, Women and Youth, Minister for Child Safety and Minister for the Prevention of Domestic and Family Violence, the Honourable Shannon Fentiman MP, also attended the round table discussion.

Council heard from community representatives about challenges and opportunities faced in the Toowoomba region. One of the key characteristics observed within the Toowoomba community was the strong community spirit and impetus for community-led action to stand up to domestic and family violence. This was evidenced by the work of Toowoomba Together Inc. and commitment by the local council and within the business community to mobilise the broader community towards efforts to address domestic and family violence.

It was acknowledged that service organisations were experiencing a consistent upward trend in the numbers of people accessing services. Challenges are arising as a result of not only these increases in demand, but also increased expectations from clients about the availability of intensive support services. Despite this, it was observed that inter-agency cooperation and collaboration had improved as a result of the reform process.

There was discussion on the needs and experiences of community members from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds, particularly an anecdotal awareness of under-reporting of incidents of domestic and family violence. The need to build trust and confidence with members of the community was acknowledged as vital to improving support to those community members.

The importance of building respectful behaviours and supporting the needs of young people was raised in a number of contexts. The strong network of schools in Toowoomba is recognised as a positive feature of the community, with schools going beyond the delivery of specific programs by attempting to embed healthy behaviours within the student cohort and develop a positive culture of respect. The respectful relationships program developed by the YWCA and TAFE was discussed as a positive example of work to effect long-term cultural and attitudinal change in relation to domestic and family violence.

The reinstatement of the Toowoomba Murri Court was noted as beneficial to improving experiences of Indigenous people appearing in court. Other law and justice reforms were noted as contributing positively to the operation of the court. However, Council members noted that feedback had been received about a lack of culturally appropriate services for Indigenous people and a consequent low uptake of these services. This leads to increased risks for women and children accessing services which would ensure their safety, and low levels of participation by perpetrators in available programs.

Overall, Council noted the efforts of the Toowoomba community are an exemplar of a community response to domestic and family violence, which supports and reinforces the messages of the Not Now, Not Ever report about the importance of the broader community to achieving change. While the community itself is well-serviced by organisations, increases in demand are expected to continue to challenge service delivery, particularly in surrounding regional and rural communities where availability of services is more limited. Further integration of and cooperation between services will be valuable in meeting these service delivery challenges.
