About child safety

Child protection in Queensland is undergoing a significant reform to ensure that children and young people are cared for, protected and safe.

The Stronger Families Reform Program focuses on delivering the right services at the right time to support families and keep children safely at home. This means working in partnership with peak bodies, service providers and communities to deliver the best outcomes for all Queensland children and their families.

As part of the reform process, a new framework for practice has been developed, one that will build on existing skills of engaging with families so they can participate more meaningfully in the child protection process, including developing stronger collaborative assessment, case planning and safety planning processes. The new framework for practice will also bring a practice of inquiry to help address over-representation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and their families.

Your contribution

Child Safety Officers are responsible for delivering statutory child protection services including assessment, intervention, casework and case management in accordance with legislation and practice guidelines.

Child Safety Officers work in teams (often multi-disciplinary) based in service centres covering specific geographical areas in various locations across Queensland.

Key responsibilities

- Deliver accountable and collaborative integrated child protection services that respect the culture and context of each child, young person, family and community in accordance with departmental policies and procedures, statutory responsibilities, and the child protection practice framework.

- As part of a multi-disciplinary team (which may include representation from other agencies), undertake high quality strengths-based child protection practice including assessment, intervention, casework and case management.

- Participate and contribute productively as a team member to form culturally appropriate, professional working relationships with colleagues, stakeholders, including children, young people and families, Non-Government Organisations (NGOs), and other service providers.

- Foster a culture and philosophy of quality frontline service delivery based on collaboration, cooperation, commitment to excellence and professional ethics.

- Maintain quality case records in accordance with departmental case management requirements.

- Participate and contribute to a culture of continuous learning, training and professional development, to ensure practice knowledge and skills are contemporary and evidence-based.

- Draw on demonstrated provisional expertise in one or more disciplinary areas in order to undertake more complex and/or demanding workloads and/or provide coaching, advice and support to less experienced Child Safety Officers (when appropriate).

Delegations

Child Safety Officers have a range of statutory delegations and are authorised officers under the Child Protection Act 1999 including the Child Protection Reform Amendment Act 2017.
Is this role for you? Please consider the following capability requirements.

To be successful in this role you will be required to demonstrate capability in the following areas:

- Technical/role specific: You work within the Framework for Practice (values, principles, practice tools, processes and core skills) providing a lens through which to view and guide professional practice within a multidisciplinary team environment. You understand the theoretical perspectives that relate to child protection practice, including the impacts of historical and contemporary policy and practices upon Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

- Supports strategic direction: You understand the organisational goals and recognise how your role contributes to the child protection reform agenda.

- Achieves results: You use your investigative and analytical skills to ensure that quality casework decisions are made and based on sound evidence, particularly when there are competing opinions, rights and emotions.

- Supports productive working relationships: You build and sustain positive relationships and work collaboratively with stakeholders to deliver integrated services for children, young people, their families and the community. You are an effective team member and have a good sense of the qualities you bring to the team.

- Displays personal drive and integrity: You are able to exercise professional judgement and take personal responsibility for delivering quality outcomes while maintaining professional practice and behaviour in a challenging and complex environment.

- Communicates with influence: You confidently present complex information and concepts clearly, succinctly and sensitively, both orally and in writing particularly when faced with challenging circumstances.
